

GEORGIANS LEAVE TONIGHT FOR INAUGURAL CEREMONY AS LEGISLATURE CONCLUDES ORGANIZATION SESSION

BALANCE REACHED IN CITY'S BUDGET BY WEST, GILLIAM

Pay Roll Slashes in All Departments and Salary Reductions Decided On by Comptroller, Chairman of Finance Group.

PLAN NOW AWAITS COUNCIL APPROVAL

10 Per Cent Cut in Wages Over $100 Monthly, 5 Per Cent Below That Advocated in Proposal.

Atlanta's budget, the problem child of the new administration, was balanced yesterday afternoon in a special meeting between B. Graham West, city comptroller, and Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, finance committee chairman.

The balancing act, as worked out by West and Gilliam, includes two measures, as follows:

1. A 6 per cent reduction in the pay roll of every city department, the method of reduction being left to the department head. The department chiefs may reach the reduction either by lopping off enough employees to absorb the 6 per cent or by imposing a blanket 6 per cent cut on salaries of all department employees.

2. In addition to the 6 per cent departmental cuts, all employees making $100 a month or less must submit to a 5 per cent cut and those making more than $100 a month will have a 10 per cent cut imposed.

The budget measure awaits only the approval of city council this afternoon and the anticipated sanction of Mayor Harfield to make it official. The measure then will go into effect immediately and will insure salary payments to city employees Wednesday.

Bank Loan Expected.
Atlanta banks have agreed to advance money for city salaries if the budget could be balanced and the measure put into effect. The budget was $62,000 out of balance and the salary cuts worked out by Comptroller West and Alderman Gilliam are declared sufficient to take care of that amount.

Councilman J. Allen Couch has asserted he will not sign a budget carrying any cuts for employees making less than $100 a month. He said, however, he would not fight the sheet unless he has an amendment to offer this afternoon. With the much-disputed budget.

Mrs. James Moffett Will Seek Divorce

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 17.—(UP)—Mrs. James A. Moffett, wife of the former Federal Housing Administration chairman, told the United Press tonight that she was contemplating starting divorce proceedings against him.

Reached by telephone, she said, "I will be entirely on a friendly basis." She refused to elaborate beyond that. Intimates of Mrs. Moffett said she was planning to file for divorce Wednesday.

WPA DROPS 96,000 FROM RELIEF ROLL IN 2-WEEK PERIOD

Hopkins Reducing Load to 2,000,000 Figure Indicated by Chief Executive in Request for Funds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Works Progress Administration disclosed today it was continuing to pare down relief jobs—despite the appearance of a new congressional bloc seeking expansion of the WPA program.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins said the number of WPA cases had been reduced by 96,000 to 2,187,400 in the two weeks ending December 26. This brought the relief load close to the 2,000,000 mark—a hypothetical level indicated by the President when he asked Congress last week to appropriate $650,000,000 to carry WPA and similar programs through the five remaining months of the fiscal year. He asked for another $140,000,000 as a sort of reserve fund he hoped would be carried over into the next fiscal year.

The whole $790,000,000 is insufficient in the view of a house bloc organized a week ago with Representative Boileau, Progressive, Wisconsin, as spokesman. During the week-end a similar bloc appeared in the senate embracing senators from six northwestern states and Michigan.

Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, joined the opposition.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(UP)—Resignation of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority was reported imminent tonight as the result of a long and bitter feud within the TVA over New Deal's "yardstick" power policies.

Morgan's first public appeal—published today—for a compromise rather than a "fight to the finish" with private utilities in the government's program.

150 MAKE ESCAPE IN UPRISING, FIRE AT ONTARIO PRISON

Guelph Prisoners Destroy Everything They Can Lay Their Hands On in Afternoon and Evening of Revengeful Rioting.

DAMAGE IS PLACED AT ABOUT $200,000

Riot Follows Protests Over Food and Refusal To Permit Convicts To Receive Yule Presents.

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press)—Prisoners ran wild in the Ontario reformatory tonight in a riot and uprising during which officers said they feared as many as 150 inmates escaped.

Using fire and weapons fashioned from pieces of furniture, the convicts swept through sections of the institution to cause damage tentatively estimated at $200,000.

At a late hour tonight, combined forces of reformatory guards and city and provincial police appeared to have the situation under control after an afternoon and evening of pandemonium.

100 Police Called.

One hundred provincial and city police joined staff guards in rounding up the riotous prisoners who smashed up furniture and fixtures, and burned bed clothing, apparently destroyed everything they could lay their hands on.

At 11 p. m. the authorities led groups of prisoners to dormitories and locked them up for the night. During the height of the riot, it was estimated scores of inmates ran from the institution and succeeded in escaping across the surrounding hills. Officials said that because of the turmoil a definite check on the number of prisoners who escaped could not be made before tomorrow.

All Who Wanted Free.

One reformatory official declared, "I am confident that every prisoner who had a desire to escape did so." More than 700 men were housed in the institution, situated on 800 acres of property a mile west of the western Ontario city.

The riot grew out of a rebellion.

2 GEORGIANS DIE IN AUTO CRASHES

O. O. Milliken, of Savannah, and John L. Parker, of Cartersville, Killed.

DARIEN, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Two prominent Georgians lost their lives today in separate automobile accidents in South Georgia and North Florida. Three others were injured seriously.

The dead: O. O. Milliken, Seaboard Air Line Railway special agent of Savannah, and John L. Parker Jr., Cartersville merchant.

Mr. Parker was killed while his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spencer, all of Cartersville.

Mr. Milliken was killed when his automobile struck a tree near here and hurled him 50 feet into dense woods near the highway. His body was not found for several hours after the car had been towed away.

The Cartersville automobile and a truck operated by five negroes collided several miles south of Jacksonville. One of the negroes was killed on a manslaughter charge. Police said they had been unable to learn details of the accident.

Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Spencer suffered scalp injuries and probably fractured arms, attendants said, while

FISHER STRIKERS REFUSE TO LEAVE

Men Hold 2 Plants at Flint, Charging 'Double Cross' to G. M. Chief.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Strikers who have occupied Fisher Body Plant No. 1 since December 20 today refused to evacuate the plant, claiming General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers of America. It said the same action was voted at the Fisher No. 2 plant.

The union announced tonight that "sit-down" strikers in the two plants here would not evacuate "under any circumstances" until completion of negotiations between the corporation and the union.

However, Martin, union chief, said the decision was "the reaction to what can only be termed a double-cross" by General Motors.

Driving While Drunk Charged to Cyclist

Radio Patrolmen Ed Payne and R. V. Paschal yesterday were inclined to think the ancient British law which calls for a man with a red lantern to precede a bicyclist is a mighty good idea.

According to their report, they were cruising early yesterday morning on Martin street, near Georgia avenue, when they spotted a man on a bicycle, weaving from side to side in a dizzy and dangerous manner. As their car neared him, the bicyclist almost veered into the vehicle, they said.

The bicyclist, who gave his name as Henry Banks, 23, of Lunar street address, was promptly taken from the wheel. He was booked on a charge of riding a bicycle while intoxicated, and was held under $200 bond. He will be arraigned this morning in recorder's court.

100 BURN TO DEATH IN SPEEDING TRAIN

Engineer Proceeds 15 Miles, Unaware of Tragedy on Chinese Railroad.

CANTON, China, Jan. 18.—(AP)—At least 100 persons were estimated today to have died when they were swept in a disastrous fire which trapped through coaches of a Canton-Hong Kong train yesterday.

It was estimated that more than 50 persons were injured. Bodies of 85 victims of the disaster, burned beyond recognition, were brought here today.

Authorities said they feared a number of additional bodies were hidden in the ruins of the burned cars. A number of injured persons arrived here for hospital treatment. Most of them suffered from burns or bruises sustained when the passengers were ejected in the blazing coaches fought to escape.

Sulphuric Acid Blast.
Railway authorities said the fire followed the explosion of sulphuric acid in a third-class coach which was jammed with travellers.

The explosion, they said, occurred while the train was proceeding at a high speed in the vicinity of Sheklung, 50 miles east of here.

The rear portion of the train rapidly became a flaming torch as the engine, unaware of the fire, kept the train speeding along.

Three coaches, all filled with Chinese, quickly were enveloped in flames and panic followed as the trapped victims fled.

FARLEY REPORTED CERTAIN TO RETIRE

Perkins, Roper, Under Growing Criticism, Rumored Ready To Quit.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(UP)—President Roosevelt neared the end of his first term of office tonight with two cabinet ministers—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper—under growing criticism and currently reported near retirement.

New Dealers, however, doubted that Mr. Roosevelt would permit either to resign under fire. He is expected to make few changes in his official family until the government reorganization project has been approved by congress. Even then it is considered unlikely that wholesale cabinet changes would come unless they were made necessary by personal considerations.

Farley Retirement Seen.
Only one resignation from the cabinet appeared certain tonight. Postmaster General James A. Farley, who sought to resign before the presidential election and was given a leave of absence instead in order that he might devote all of his time to his job as chairman of the Democratic national committee, will retire to private life.

Madame Perkins and Roper repeatedly have been compelled to deny reports that they would resign. Criticism of Secretary Perkins has been that the labor post, pitched into unprecedented importance by industrial reforms under the New Deal, is not one that should be administered by a woman. She has been assailed frequently for leaning too heavily upon an assistant, Edward F. McGrady, to restore peace between warring workers and employers.

McGrady is preparing to leave the "little cabinet" and accept one of several lucrative jobs offered him in private industry. One of Secretary Perkins' most outspoken critics, Brigadier General Hugh S. Johnson, in a recent newspaper column charged that she had little knowledge of industrial relations and that McGrady's retirement would be an irreparable blow to the New Deal.

May Get Post.
There have been suggestions that, if Madame Perkins retires, McGrady be elevated to the cabinet post. This shift, it is understood, would not be satisfactory to McGrady.

In contrast to Secretary Perkins, who, early in the New Deal, refused to accept McGrady as an assistant because she believed his appointment was patronage tainted, Roper has been subjected to biting attacks because of alleged inefficient aid.

1,000 Plan Trip; Congress Awaiting 'Keynote' Message

Spectacular Conflict With High Court To Mark Beginning of Roosevelt's Second Term; Tariff Powers May Be Extended.

F. D. R. MAY DEFINE NEW OBJECTIVES

Chief Executive's Proposal for the Continuation of Old Laws Is Expected To Be Taken Up.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt will begin his second term this week, engaged in a spectacular conflict with the supreme court and with congress directing itself to action on his legislative program.

On Wednesday at noon he will stand before a throng at the capitol comprising the might of the nation and its humbler citizens and receive the traditional, constitution-prescribed oath of office from Chief Justice Hughes.

Then, he will deliver an address to which Washington is looking forward as sounding the keynote of his second administration and expanding the definition of objectives outlined in his recent messages to congress.

Extension of Laws.
For congress, the day will be an interim in a week mainly devoted to carrying forward the President's partially outlined program, of approving the continuation or extension of laws enacted at his urging in days when the New Deal was young.

The senate on Tuesday will begin consideration of a bill to prolong the President's authority to devalue the dollar, already once exercised, and to continue the stabilization fund, that $100,000,000 pot of gold with which the Treasury endeavors to keep the currency on an even keel.

Administration leaders hoped to push the measure to passage by nightfall, but were uncertain whether that could be done. From the numerically feeble Republican minority came indications of opposition, which some thought would prolong the debate until Thursday.

Stabilization Fund.
The stabilization fund is a sore subject with Senator Vandenberg, a leader on the Republican side, and while he would not reveal his plans there was a possibility that he might demand an accounting of how the fund has been used.

The house on Tuesday will start work on a bill continuing the Reconstruction Corporation, and on Thursday, the ways and means committee propose to take up a measure extending for three years the law under which the President is authorized to reduce tariffs in return for similar concessions from other nations.

The inauguration scene, with Chief Justice Hughes at front stage, will call sharply to mind, the President's persistent clash with the supreme court, and his recent insistence that courts adopt a more "enlightened" interpretation of the constitution.

Behind this clash lies an issue which may become the central theme of Roosevelt's second administration—whether congress has, or shall be given authority to enact laws regulating the minimum wages and maximum hours of labor, and the business and competitive practices of its employers.

In his annual message to congress, Mr. Roosevelt said he thought a constitutional amendment to permit this shift, it is understood, would not be satisfactory to McGrady.

Two Special Trains Will Carry Leaders of State to Nation's Capital for Participation in Round of Brilliant Festivities.

GOVERNOR, SOLONS HEAD DELEGATION

Rivers Expected To Tell Factors in Dismissal of Henson Before Conclusion of Assembly Session

The Georgia general assembly today will conclude its organization and tonight will leave for Washington where, with Governor Rivers and other distinguished Georgians, it will join in the program to be climaxed by the reinauguration of President Roosevelt.

A few more bills are expected to be introduced during the day and a special message is expected from Governor Rivers on his dismissal of A. L. Henson as veterans' service officer but no important business is on today's program. Most of the senators and representatives spent the week end at their homes and only those who are making the Washington trip are expected to attend the session today.

Two special trains over the Seaboard Air Line railway will carry the Georgia party, 1,000 strong, to Washington. They will depart from the Terminal station here at 8 o'clock tonight and arrive in the national capital tomorrow afternoon. Governor and Mrs. Rivers, Speaker and Mrs. Roy W. Harris, of Augusta, and Adjutant General Jack Stoddard will head the first train. Chairman Charles S. Reid, of the state Democratic executive committee, Mrs. Virginia Follen Price, of Louisville, the national committeewoman, and Senate President and Mrs. John B. Spivey, of Swainsboro, will head the second train.

Shortly after their arrival in Washington tomorrow afternoon the Georgians will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Robert at a reception at the Mayflower hotel. Early tomorrow night Governor and Mrs. Rivers

Greene Sheriff Held For Shooting Woman

MADISON, Ga., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Chief A. H. Booth, of the Morgan county police, said a man booked as Alva Reynolds, alias Virginia Follen Greene county, was arrested today on a charge of assault with intent to murder in connection with the wounding of a woman at Rutledge, nine miles from here.

Booth said the woman, listed as Mrs. Della Mae Arnold, of Greensboro, county seat of Greene, was wounded early today in a railroad depot at Rutledge. She was brought to a Madison hospital where her condition was reported critical.

The officer said Mrs. Arnold was struck by a pistol bullet which passed through her arm and shoulder.

Booth said Reynolds, 45 years old and the father of four children, made no statement. Reynolds has been sheriff of Greene county for eight years.

The shooting occurred when the accused man and the woman, accompanied by another couple, stopped in Rutledge en route from Watson Springs, Ga., to Greensboro, Ga. Booth said. The officer said there were three witnesses to the shooting.

1,000 MORE CITIES JOIN IN ASSAULT ON POLIO BY ORGANIZING BALLS

6,000 Municipalities Will Celebrate Roosevelt's Birthday This Year.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—More than 6,000 United States cities and towns—an increase of more than 1,000 over any previous year—will hold Roosevelt birthday balls January 30 to aid infantile paralysis sufferers, the arrangements committee announced today.

The fourth annual benefit celebration falls this year on the President's 55th birthday. Thirty per cent of the proceeds go to the Warm Springs, Ga., foundation, where Mr. Roosevelt has been treated, and the remainder

Police Radio Brings Message of Tragedy

Intra-police communications, which usually deal with crimes and violence, revealed a story of a different sort yesterday at Atlanta police headquarters.

From West Springfield, Mass., came a telegram addressed to the chief of police, signed by Betty Ennis, and requesting aid in finding Daniel Ennis, 10, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weight 150 pounds, who is hitch-hiking from Meridian, Miss., to the Massachusetts city.

The telegram contained the line: "The boy's mother is dying," and requested police to instruct Ennis to wire home at once, and await further instructions. The message also revealed the youth has a broken arm.

of the funds where the affairs are held.

A statement issued by the headquarters of Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the ball committee, said: "More than a million dollars will be raised in a single day to fight infantile paralysis. There are 1,137 more cities and towns organized than in any of the previous three years."

Doherty, who was ill in Philadelphia yesterday, was said by associates here to be well enough to go to Washington today. They said the utilities magnate, who has been in poor health for years, was not in a serious condition.

Carl Byoir, of New York, is in active charge of the arrangements for the balls as general director of the national committee.

He said more than 1,800 daily newspapers, 6,132 weeklies and 587 radio stations were co-operating to publicize the function.

and other state leaders will be guests of Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George at dinner at the Mayflower.

Tomorrow night the Georgia Society of Washington will entertain the visitors from home with a dance.

Tickets for the various functions will be distributed to the members of the party on their arrival in Washington.

H. E. Pleasant, assistant passenger agent for the Seaboard said last night that practically all available space on both trains had been reserved.

"Georgians are more enthusiastic about attending President Roosevelt's second inauguration than they were his first," Mr. Pleasant said last night. "We could fill a couple of more cars on each train if they were available and I am sorry that they are not."

Governor Rivers spent most of yesterday at his office reading and answering his mail, a task he has been prevented from doing because of the steady stream of callers on business days.

May Name Officials.

He said last night he hopes to appoint a new director of veterans' service during the day and also may appoint a supervisor of purchases.

L. T. Gillen, of Ashburn, prominent American Legion leader and a former speaker pro tem of the house of representatives is understood to have the "inside track" on the service post but it could not be learned who the Governor has under consideration for the office of supervisor of purchases.

It was reported last night that Chairman J. B. Jones and Comptroller General William B. Harrison, comprising a majority of the revenue commission, had agreed upon the selection of Sam Boykin, Carrollton lawyer, to be chief clerk of the income tax division of the revenue department. He will succeed John Andy Smith, of Talbotton.

Another appointment was opened to Rivers recently by the resignation of Joseph E. Chappell as solicitor of the city court of Dublin to assume the post of secretary to United States Senator Richard B. Russell Jr.

Rivers said he did not expect to make the Dublin appointment until after his return from Washington Thursday night. Dublin attorneys reported to be seeking the place include Al Hatcher, Emory S. Baldwin, Rufus Stephens, Lester F. Watson, Stanley A. Reese and Rollin A. Stanley.

Chappell executed what observers regarded as a coup to save the appointment for Rivers. Former Governor Talmadge declined to commission him week before last, after his appointment as Russell's secretary was announced. The commission was issued, however, upon word from Ordinary E. D. White that Chappell had sworn he did not then hold any federal office. Chappell was sworn in at Washington a few days later.

FLORIDA WILL SEND TWO TRAIN LOADS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Governor Fred P. Cone will head a party of several hundred Floridians leaving here tomorrow to participate in President Roosevelt's second inauguration.

Two special trains will be required for the visitors, who will arrive in Washington Tuesday.

The Governor and Mrs. Cone will be guests Wednesday for the inauguration ceremonies, for the parade that follows and at a White House tea late in the day for governors and their wives. The Cones will be accompanied by the Governor's daughter, Mrs. Mark Byron, of Miami.

AGNES SCOTT TO HOLD PRESBYTERY PAGEANT

4 TRAPPED BY STORM SAVED AFTER 18 DAYS

Body of Victim-Hero Is Found Frozen in Desert.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Three women and a man who had been snowbound 18 days in a desert mine camp with the body of a second man who froze to death were brought here late today by rescuers.

The four survivors suffered from shock and exposure after three-week isolation in the mine camp 125 miles from here in the frozen desert was Fred Miller, 45. He froze to death December 31 while trying to bring aid to the others in his party.

Two of the women had frostbitten toes. Mrs. Lee Prettyman, wife of the mine operator, and Doris Dunn, negro cook.

Mrs. James Poe suffered only from exposure, but her husband had a frozen toe which it was feared might have to be amputated.

None of the four was reported in serious condition.

Prettyman, who had located the snowbound party from the air on this fourth flight in four days, led the rescuers to the mine early last week.

Mrs. Prettyman related a story of suffering and heroic struggle against blizzards, climaxed by seven and a half days of fearful waiting by the women in an automobile stalled in snow drifts.

She said the three women and two men left the mine December 27 after her husband, who had left December 19 for supplies, failed to return.

Their car stalled in drifts the same day. Failing to free it, Miller started December 30 for the mine, 20 miles away, to bring aid.

He failed to return. The others waited in the car four days while a blizzard raged.

Then on January 2, Joe, Mrs. Prettyman's 23-year-old brother, started in search of Miller. Unfamiliar with the country, he wandered all day, slept in a cave at night, and early January 3 stumbled upon a mail box. Tracks led him to the mine, but he was so dazed he was unable to tell his mission for several hours.

Next day a party from the mine reached the stalled car in a heavy truck, and took the three women to the mine. They had remained in the automobile seven days and a half, subsisting on three cans of corned beef, a loaf of bread and snow.

En route back to the mine, the party found Miller's body where he had fallen in the snow and died, about nine miles from the stalled automobile.

"Empty Saddle" Filled, Old "Corral" Missing

After playing cowboy and "corraling" a stolen horse at Peachtree and Baker streets last night, police found a more difficult problem on their hands in locating the owner of the animal.

Detectives W. W. Ford and Lewis Whitely reported they began search for the stolen horse, a gray animal, after an elderly negro, Edwin Williams, reported it had been stolen from the rear of his home at 60 Hilliard street.

The horse was found, and promptly—well, not so promptly—brought under control. He wanted to frisk a bit first. The detectives took the animal to 60 Hilliard street. Its owner was unknown there.

After much questioning of persons in the neighborhood, and with the aid of a radio car, Williams was finally located in the rear of 160 Hilliard street, where he and his horse were reunited.

was unnecessary, that the constitution was sufficiently flexible to permit it, if given a "liberal" rather than a "narrow" interpretation.

The weather for the nation's first mid-winter inauguration provided a topic for speculation today while a chilly rain drenched the bunting and splashed upon acres of temporary stands at the capitol and along Pennsylvania avenue. The weatherman, however, while making no definite commitments so far in advance, thought, conditions would be better by Wednesday.

INAUGURAL REHEARSAL SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A "dress rehearsal" for the inauguration of President Roosevelt will be held in front of the capitol tomorrow.

"We will go through the whole performance just to make sure there will be no hitches on inauguration day," said Senator Neely, Democrat, West Virginia, chairman of a congressional committee on arrangements.

The senator said participants in the actual ceremonies, or their representatives, with the exception of the President, will take part in the pre-view.

FLINT AUTO STRIKERS REFUSE TO QUIT SHOPS

that our employes can go back to work."

Approximately 3,000 persons, gathered in a cold drizzle at Plant No. 1 to watch the men march from the factory, heard the announcement through loud-speakers.

"Will Hold the Fort."

The speaker, identified as Victor Reuther, organizer for the U. A. W., declared the strikers were prepared "to hold the fort all winter if necessary."

The men inside the plant—said by the union to number 1,500—watched and listened through the windows and cheered as the amplifier blared the announcement of their action.

The announcement said the vote of the "stay-in" strikers was unanimous. Reuther, through the amplifier, called for "one big boo" for General Motors, and a "bigger one" for Boyesen.

Strikers hung from second-story windows of the plant effigies labeled "General Motors stool pigeon" and "Boyesen stool pigeon."

Evacuation of the two plants here would have completed the union's compliance with terms of the truce and set the stage for negotiations scheduled to open tomorrow at Detroit with General Motors representatives. Other striker-held General Motors plants were vacated yesterday.

Crowd Orderly.

The crowd was orderly. The only officers in sight were uniformed city police directing traffic. Union pickets,

Plays With Explosive, Boy, 11, Loses Fingers

Two fingers on the left hand of Robert Payne Wilks, 11, of Ben Hill, were blown off, and the other member badly injured, when he exploded a dynamite cap in the yard of his home late yesterday afternoon.

The injured boy was admitted to Grady hospital. He suffered shock, in addition to the injury to his hand. His mother told hospital attendants the boy was playing with the cap when it went off.

who have been stationed near the plant since the strike began, helped the police keep traffic moving. The No. 1 plant is at the city limits on the principal Detroit-Flint highway.

Reuther announced to the crowd a telegram was sent to General Motors informing the company of the strikers' action.

Half an hour after the demonstration began, the crowd began to dwindle. From the sound truck came the announcement another demonstration would start soon at Fisher plant No. 2, scene of a riot last Monday night which injured 27 persons and brought two regiments of national guardsmen to Flint.

Effigies Beaten.

As a parting blast from the sound truck came the statement, "General Motors, we are serving notice on you that the boys in the plant will hold the fort until you make up your mind whether you will bargain collectively with the workers' union." The speaker declared that the Flint Alliance "is not a workers' organization."

As effigies were suspended from the plant windows, the band struck up "John Brown's Body." Two strikers reached out and belabored the dummies with wooden staves until one of the effigies was thoroughly smashed up.

A traffic jam extended nearly a mile beyond the plant, with hundreds of automobiles barely moving.

No. 2 Plant Cheers.

An even larger crowd was at the No. 2 Fisher plant when the sound truck arrived. The men within the plant—said by the union to number 450—were clustered around the windows and on the roof. They cheered when their refusal to vacate the plant was announced through loudspeakers.

Formal announcement was made that the referendum in the Flint plant was taken after Wyndham Mortimer, first vice president of U. A. W., had conveyed to the "stay-in" strikers information concerning the exchange of telegrams between the Alliance and Knudsen.

The men were told that General Motors had violated its "clear agreement for bi-lateral negotiations" with the union.

Officers of the 2,300 national guardsmen who are here to preserve order said they were "alert" but that they did not expect trouble.

UNION SAYS G. M. C. BEHIND ALLIANCE

DETROIT, Jan. 17. — (P) — The United Automobile Workers of America, claiming a "breach of faith" by General Motors Corporation, directed its "stay-in" strikers to hold their posts in two Flint, Mich., plants tonight, on the eve of scheduled negotiations with the huge motor car concern for settlement of the widespread automotive tie-up.

Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, in a telegram to Senator La Follette, chairman of a special senate committee investigating civil liberties violations, tonight charged a request of the Flint Alliance headed by George E. Boyesen was "either directly inspired by General Motors or has been handled through strikebreaking detective agencies which would profit by outbreaks of violence."

Saying an "emergency has arisen," Martin left for Flint.

Governor Murphy, in Detroit today, kept in touch with Genesee county (Flint) officials, commanders of the National Guard, concentration at Flint, and General Motors executives.

$200 'Pension' Winner Ready for Spending

CHELAN, Wash., Jan. 17. — (P) — A 63-year-old unemployed orchard worker set out today to spend within the next month $200 awarded him in the first practical experiment of the Townsend pension plan.

"I certainly won't have any trouble finding out how to spend the money," said C. C. Fleming, winner of a contest to determine the number one spender.

Fleming, almost overcome with emotion when a tally of votes at a Townsend dance early today showed him the recipient of 200 one dollar bills, won in dramatic fashion over Myron Perkins, 47-year-old runner-up. Tickets for the dance carried one vote each for an eligible spending candidate.

Fleming was credited with 256 votes from the Townsend partisans in this apple growers' town of 1,400 population. Perkins officially received 253 votes. He claimed 267 but found he had left 14 at home and was on a mile hike through the snow to get them when the voting deadline was reached.

The winner accepted the "tagged money" on condition he spend it in Cheelan within 30 days.

Each of the dollar bills was tagged so that it would be identified with its movements in the city's business. Lamb said the town's merchants had agreed to pay a 2 per cent tax on each bill in every transaction in which one appeared.

Georgians Chosen Leaders of State Fair Association

The Association of Georgia Fairs has been retained to function as a state group, following dissolution of the Association of Agricultural and Industrial Fairs of the Southeast. The new officers started immediately on a campaign to have the state legislature exempt carnivals operating at agricultural and industrial fairs from what were termed "prohibitive taxes."

SOCIALISTS DYNAMITE HOSPITAL IN MADRID

Large Force of Trapped Fascists Turn Machine Guns on Besiegers.

MADRID, Jan. 17. — (P) — Socialist troops dynamited the right wing of Clinic hospital today and trapped a large force of Fascists who manned machine guns from an upper floor to stand siege.

In striking parallel to the siege of Alcazar last summer, when insurgents held out in underground dungeons for many weeks until rescued by Fascist comrades, these Madrid troops set off the dynamite mine at 7 a. m.

They had prepared for the attack throughout the night and tried to storm the hospital, sprayed over many acres in northwest Madrid, at once.

The blast destroyed the staircase in the hospital wing and the insurgents were cut off from escape on an upper floor. There they installed machine guns and awaited attack.

The operation room and theater of the hospital, where the insurgents had concentrated powerful machine gun nests, were reported destroyed.

Sniping Battles.

Madrid militia swarmed through the battered lower floors and sniping battles went on throughout the day—with a detachment of Fascist besiegers of Madrid themselves under siege.

The government troops pushed operations in other sections of University City, also, particularly in the region about the philosophy building.

Cold, heavy rain and fog restricted action elsewhere.

For weeks the Fascists have clung to University City positions, despite repeated government attacks. The Fascists have, however, been unable thus far to penetrate toward the center of the capital.

Internal Strife.

Today marked the end of the sixth month since the civil war broke out in Morocco, a period in which Spain has been torn by internal strife paralleled in her history for property destruction and loss of life.

It appeared certain to observers here that the whole course of Spanish social history has been changed. For the first time, the Spanish people, at least in part of the country held by the Socialist government, have themselves come into power.

Thousands of men who hitherto held small jobs or were unemployed are being placed in positions of power and authority—as heads of defense councils, leaders of political units of the Socialist-Communist government, members of committees which act as local governments or direct factories and other property to which a degree of socialization has been applied.

THREE WOMEN HURT AS 2 CARS OVERTURN

Slippery pavement caused two automobiles to overturn early last night on the Dixie highway, between Griffin and Jonesboro, resulting in injury to three women travelers.

Miss Lydia Jones, 25, of Boaz, Ala., suffered a fractured jaw and was admitted to Grady hospital. She was riding in a car with Mrs. A. Hager, also of Boaz, who was unhurt. They were en route to Florida.

Mrs. Frank J. Carter and Mrs. T. C. Warren, both of Anderson, S. C., suffered cuts and bruises when the car in which they were riding overturned four times. They were dismissed following treatment at Grady hospital. Two other occupants of the vehicle were unhurt.

DOCTOR TREATS MAN HE STRUCK WITH AUTO

Dr. W. Troy Bivings, well-known Atlanta physician, yesterday reported to police his automobile struck a pedestrian on Ivy street, near Peachtree street, late Saturday night.

He said he took the injured man, Emmett Walsh Jr., 28, of 137 Bolling road, to St. Joseph's infirmary, where he is now under his own care.

Walsh suffered several broken ribs and severe lacerations of the head. Dr. Bivings, who lives at 20 West Wesley avenue, was proceeding north on Ivy street at the time of the accident.

Georgia as 'Reno of East' Planned By Representative From Augusta

State Representative Billy Barrett, author of a liberalized divorce bill, announced determination yesterday to put Georgia in competition with Reno for the nation's divorce trade.

Barrett, 25-year-old attorney and nationally known bridge expert, said in addition to his legislative proposal he would seek a constitutional amendment to make divorce easy in this state.

His bill would reduce residence requirement from one year to 30 days. The constitutional amendment would be necessary to abolish the law requiring two verdicts, at separate court terms, before a divorce can be made final.

The flow of cash from discontented mates would be a boon to Georgia's seashore resort area, Barrett said. Already there are exclusive hotels for seasonal tourists in Augusta, Thomasville, Savannah and Sea Island.

Even with present divorce statutes Barrett's home town of Augusta has nearly three divorces for every marriage. Lawyers attribute this to the city's location on the border of Georgia and South Carolina, the latter without any provision for divorce.

The 1936 score stood: Marriages, 157; divorces, 504.

On the other hand, South Carolina gets the marriage trade because that state does not require five days' notice of intention to wed, as Georgia does. Aiken, S. C., nearby resort center, had 1,936 marriages last year.

the same treatment is extended to victims of minor incidents in poorer homes—it is high time that measures have been taken in parliament to put some restraint upon the license which amounts to an intolerable and ever-growing scandal. Otherwise, certain individuals who have grown rich upon ruthless exploitation of other people's private lives, will find they have come into conflict with men who are not in such a helpless position as some who recently have been tortured on the wheel of a yellow press."

Allen's letter was believed prompted by the attention various newspapers have paid to the alleged close friendship between his wife and the Duke. The Daily Express, which disclosed itself for suppressing news of the friendship of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Simpson, said it merely sought to prove the rumors false.

ENRAGED GUARD SLAYS WIFE, NIECE AND SELF

McCOMB, Miss., Jan. 17. — (P) — An enraged prison guard shot and killed his wife, her niece and then himself, but spared his prattling three-month-old little girl who sat beside him in an automobile.

A negro found the bodies of Ed Felder, his wife and Dora Dean Simmons, 18, niece of Mrs. Felder who had been making her home with them. Miss Simmons was found on the back seat, her body leaning over on that of Felder, whose head lay almost in the lap of the girl. Mrs. Felder's body was found outside the car.

An army revolver was found clutched in the hand of Felder, a Pike county prison guard, known locally as an expert pistol marksman. The three-month-old daughter of the Felders was found unharmed in the machine.

HOG CALLER PERFORMS FOR ELITE OF GOTHAM

Chardon's Pride at Barnyard Revel; Swine, Cattle and Sheep Also There.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17. — (P) — Gotham's farm playboys and girls toddled home early today at an hour that real farmers begin the day's chores, and with them toddled Tom Bevington, pride of Chardon, Ohio, and as a hog-caller the hit of Eliza Maxwell's barnyard party.

But besides winning the plaudits of a cosmopolitan crowd which included Film Star Kay Francis, Tap Dancer Roy Bolger, Illustrator Nysa Mein, Actress Ina Claire, Playwright Clare Booth and Socialite Mrs. C. V. Whitney, Bevington had his wish to see the ocean gratified before he left for home tonight.

That, he confided, was the first thing he wanted to see. After that came George Washington bridge and the Bronx zoo.

Bevington confided, too, that he really wasn't a hog-caller, although he called and there sidled out six of the finest porkers on Cleveland Leonard Hanna's farm, over the slippery side hall floor of a Park avenue hotel.

"I run a wood-chopping outfit and a sawmill of my own just back of Chardon," he explained.

"You know, out in the woods you get to hollering when a tree falls, and I holler pretty loud. A friend of mine came along and told me Mr. Hanna was looking for a hog-caller and said why don't I go up there and try. There was one other fellow but he got shy and backed out, so here I am."

If anybody had told me last Monday that I'd be here in New York at a shindig like this I'd have said he was a liar."

But there was Bevington, wearing an old corduroy cap and overalls burst at the seams, watching social celebrities and movie stars dance by on the crowded floor.

Women came up and gushed: "Mr. Bevington, you were perfectly marvelous, the way you called those hogs." But Tom Bevington took it in stride. He drank ice water while the party drank champagne "milked" from a life-like mechanical cow.

Hanna's prize porkers curled up in a dark corner and went to sleep. Sheep and cows in pens along the ballroom wall made the noises peculiar to their kind.

Miss Maxwell, party-giver-extraordinary of two continents, announced there hadn't been a party like it before in a New York hotel.

And Tom Bevington stood in a corner and grinned, showing where four front teeth were missing, and allowed that this was different than the country dances back home.

HERALDRY AUTHORITY, GEORGE SWINTON, DIES

Scotland Yard officials took charge of the body. The cause of his death was not disclosed.

Captain Swinton was Lyon King of Arms and secretary to the Order of the Thistle from 1927 to 1929.

NEGOTIATORS WORKING TO HASTEN CONCLUSION OF 80-DAY DOCK STRIKE

8-Hour Day for Cooks and Stewards Is Only Issue That Bars Peace.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—More agreements appeared in sight today between striking maritime unions and shipowners who worked through the week-end to hasten the finale of the costly 80-day walkout.

The longshoremen considered a joint offer from all groups of employers, hinted they would make a counterproposal and both sides indicated an accord was expected.

Spokesmen said negotiators were on the verge of agreement for the masters, mates and pilots and the radio telegraphers.

Shipowners met the cooks and stewards in a new attempt to solve the eight-hour-day issue for that group of workers. This appeared to be the only major issue remaining on the peace path.

The employers and the marine engineers completed a tentative agreement yesterday. Previously negotiators had reached accords involving the sailors and the marine firemen.

Union leaders have announced formal ratification votes would be taken among the memberships of each of the seven unions as soon as tentative agreements were ready for submission to all.

The employer offer to the longshoremen promised $1 per hour for all work between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. and $1.50 an hour outside the prescribed period, with relief gangs to be furnished after the first six hours. The relief gang thus would work two hours for straight pay of $1 an hour and at $1.50 an hour thereafter.

As an alternative, the employers said they would grant a tentative agreement for the period between 8 a. m. and 3 p. m. and $1.40 an hour outside that time limit. This is virtually the same as wages paid before the strike.

Union spokesmen indicated they might make a counter proposal of $1 an hour for any six hours between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. and $1.50 thereafter.

The difficulty involving the cooks

Tombstone Loses Its 'Lynching Limb'

TOMBSTONE, Ariz., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Tombstone today lost its "lynching limb"—last vestige of the days when summary justice ended the careers of horse thieves and killers.

The limb was chopped from one of the town's main streets by order of the city council. For many years it was the last suitable place for "stringing 'em up" in the manner to which Tombstone was accustomed during its frontier days.

But the two officials ordered it removed because it interfered with vegetable peddlers' trucks.

and stewards concerns whether they shall have an 8-hour day on passenger ships. Employers have suggested they work nine hours out of any 13 on call. All other union groups are on a basis of eight hours' work a day or less.

It was said the masters, mates and pilots and the shipowners were in accord on all issues except wages. The union asked a 25 per cent boost and was offered a flat $10-a-month increase.

Employers yesterday offered radio telegraphers a flat $10-a-month increase, making the minimum $135. It was said this union and the shipowners were in accord on "all fundamental" and that only the wage issue and minor provisions of a working agreement remained to be worked out.

move, saying that "personally, I think the President's recommendation for a deficiency appropriation of $700,000,000 is inadequate."

Another of the senate group, Nye, Republican, North Dakota, said "we have not determined what amount will be necessary, but it will not be less than $1,000,000,000."

The deficiency appropriation will be necessary within a week or two because the $1,425,000,000 appropriated by the last congress is almost exhausted.

The absorption of workers by private industry during 1936 was reflected in the WPA's figure of 2,187,044 for its work roll as of December 29. This, said the statement, was a decline of 851,029 below the peak figure of the year, reached during the week ending February 29.

OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR DEFIES EXTORTIONIST

Marland Says 'I Can Take Care of Myself,' Offers Reward of $500.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Scorning extra guards, Governor E. W. Marland went about his usual Sunday routine today, ignoring the threats in a $5,000 extortion letter delivered at his executive offices yesterday.

"I can take care of myself," said Marland, smilingly calling attention to his ability as a pistol-marksman.

He posted a $500 reward for the sender of the letter, which threatened both the chief executive and his attractive wife.

"If somebody else had received the letter I would have made it a damned substantial reward," he declared. "I hope if anybody else does receive a letter like that they will report it to police."

The Governor and Mrs. Marland relaxed at a movie last night, a few hours after the pencil-scratched note had come to their attention. They were driven as usual by their chauffeur and the customary night watchman guarded the executive mansion in the heart of Oklahoma City's rich oil field.

State crime bureau operatives, to whom Marland sent the letter, gave no indication today they had any clues to the identity of the sender. The letter, postmarked at 9 p. m. Friday and signed "Bill," was handed by four attaches in the Governor's office yesterday before it was called to his attention.

"You are a rich man," the note said, "and I want you to give us a donation of $5,000 in bills that are not marked. If you know what is good for you you will not say anything about this to police or anybody else. If you do it will be too bad for you and your wife."

Three Splendid Features Are Offered at Capitol

A big load of "money's worth" and entertainment is on hand this week at the Capitol theater, where, in addition to a feature-length picture and a fine stage show, a special film depicting the activities of agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation opened yesterday for a week's engagement.

The FBI film is a 30-minute short subject, "You Can't Get Away With It," narrated by Lowell Thomas and filmed under the personal supervision of J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI.

The picture is a vivid behind-the-scenes celluloid record of this highly efficient branch of the government. It shows how G-men train for war against crime; the scientific, "crime-busting" laboratory, and is spiced with such dramatic action as the captures of Dillinger, Pretty Boy Floyd and other notorious public enemies.

The main feature picture is another in the entertaining series of "Hollywood Casidy" stories, "Heart of the West," starring William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and a host of other capable performers.

On the stage, there is entertainment galore, with "Parisian Follies," presented with a cast of 25 stage and radio stars, including a line of pretty and talented girls.

The Parisian Rhythm Kings and Enrico Leide's Capitolians furnish the kind of music audiences prefer. Interesting shorts round out one of the fullest and best bills ever presented at the Capitol—L. F.

Work, Rest, Food Routine Advocated for Longevity

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Dr. Soma Weiss of Harvard Medical school today advised those who desire a long life to develop "an intelligent, rhythmic daily routine of food, work and rest."

"This is particularly true," he said in a lecture here, "for those with high blood pressure."

For such persons, he added, "drug and medication in general play at best a secondary role."

Overweight should be corrected, but drastic restriction in diet should be avoided. Smoking may be harmful in certain of these patients, but small amounts of mild alcoholic beverages, such as beer, port or sherry wine, taken with meals, usually exert a beneficial relaxing effect on the nervous system."

Oklahoma Governor Reads Extortion Letter

Governor E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma, is shown seated in his office studying an extortion note which threatened harm to him and his wife unless $5,000 were paid. "I am one of the best pistol shots in Oklahoma and I can take care of myself," the Governor commented grimly.

sheet only one of a number of pieces of business appearing on the council agenda this afternoon, a busy session is foreseen.

The ordinance committee's three-to-one vote of approval for a ban on the sale of wine or beer on Sunday appears scheduled for a fight on the council floor, with Alderman Robert Carpenter asserting he intends to submit a minority report on the committee action in an attempt to stop passage on the measure. Alderman Carpenter presented the dissenting vote in the ordinance committee's vote on the proposed measure.

Several councilmen have stated they will oppose complete prohibition of sales on Sunday but indicated they would favor a ban on sales during church hours. A number of beer and wine dealers appearing before the ordinance committee at a recent public hearing declared the church-hour ban was agreeable but asserted their business would be ruined if sales were prohibited from midnight Saturday to 6 o'clock Monday morning, as proposed in the measure.

Also scheduled for discussion on the council floor are resolutions asking that the legislature aid Atlanta in reducing its deficit and providing for relief, and offering Battle Hill sanctuary, debt free, to the state as a part of its Alto system. The measures are expected to gain easy passage in council, as most of its members have declared themselves favorable to them.

Approved by the police committee, an ordinance will be presented to abolish the job of assistant chief of police in charge of detectives and to place the detective department under the supervision of the police chief, effective February 1. This measure also is expected to be passed by a large majority.

Another resolution authorizing the mayor and two councilmen to negotiate for the sale of the old city hall site for $500,000, will be introduced by Councilman Howard Haile, he indicated.

CINEMA DIRECTOR, BOLESLAWSKI, DIES

Pole Had Made Many Successes, Including 'Theodora Goes Wild.'

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Richard Boleslawski, 49, a motion picture director, died today at his home, apparently the victim of a heart attack. He was a native of Poland.

Boleslawski was directing "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" for M-G-M at the time of his death.

He came to Hollywood in 1929 to direct "Rasputin" after several years of Broadway stage producing. Among the films he directed were "The Empress," "Theodora Goes Wild" and "The Garden of Allah," a technical production.

A native of Warsaw, Boleslawski was graduated from the University of Odessa, was identified for some time with the Moscow Art theater and was a lieutenant of Polish lancers during the war.

Boleslawski was author of several books, including "The Way of the Lancer" and "Lancers Down." The widow and a son, Richard Jr., 18 months old, survive.

HEAVY RAINS THREATEN TO BOOST FLOOD TOLL

Ohio, White and Wabash Rivers Are Nearing Crests; Zero Weather Reported.

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Additional flood damage threatened the midwest today. General rains fell throughout the area, pouring more water into steadily rising rivers.

The Ohio, White, St. Francis, Kaskaskia and Wabash rivers were above flood stages. They were expected to reach their crests Tuesday or Wednesday. Secondary streams, however, were falling, permitting some refugees to return to their homes.

Galena, Ill., saw the Ohio rise two feet in the last 24 hours to reach 41 feet, a foot above flood stage. Farmers reported serious losses, particularly in damage to stored grains. The St. Francis rose to within 18 inches of the tops of the levees in southeastern Missouri.

Although the Wabash slackened the pace of its rise, it had reached 23.8 feet, 7.8 feet above flood stage. A hundred families in flood menaced homes were moved to higher ground at Mount Carmel, Ill.

The west fork of White river at Elliston, Ind., had reached a stage of 30.1 feet, the highest since the catastrophic 1913 flood and within 1.2 feet of that mark.

Meanwhile automobile, train and airplane traffic was hampered throughout the area. Fog grounded all east-bound planes in Chicago. In many places communication systems were seriously crippled.

The weather forecast was for rain or snow in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky Monday.

Moderately warm weather prevailed over most of the east and south as rain continued to fall. Arkansas rivers were rising, threatening to inundate additional thou-

Police Recover Car Before Loss Is Known

Atlanta detectives yesterday recovered an automobile before its owner knew it had been stolen.

The detectives, George Barrett and L. H. Satterfield, found the car abandoned in the rear of 628 North Avenue, N. W., and then called upon the owner, Frank T. Davis, of 1343 Peachtree street.

"Well, sir, we found your car," they announced.

"What car? My car's in the garage," answered Davis.

He was then told to look in the empty garage in the rear of his home. He did, and hurried back to express thanks to the investigators for their quick work.

sands of acres of land in the northeast and southwest sections of the state. The St. Francis river broke through two levees near Paragould, Ark., flooding 7,000 acres of lowlands. The Ouachita river spread over a seven-mile area near Camden, Arkansas.

In the west, Montana reported snow falling. Temperatures there and in Wyoming and Colorado were normal. Oregon had rain and snow flurries. Temperatures in Nebraska were generally below freezing. A light snow fell at Devils Lake, N. D., where the thermometer recorded 10 below zero. Fargo, N. D., also showed a —10. Minot, Williston and Jamestown, N. D., reported —8.

OWENS ANNEXES FOUR POSITIONS ON ALL-AMERICA

By Orlo Robertson.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Once again emphasizing Jesse Owens' position as last year's premier track and field athlete, Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, today named Ohio State's Olympic sprint and broad jump champion to four positions on each of his All-America and all-college teams for 1938.

Holder of five world records and co-holder of another, Owens was listed as America's outstanding performer in the 100 and 200-meter dash, 200-meter hurdles and the broad jump. The fleet negro, now a professional, holds the international marks at 100 yards, 200 meters, 200 yards, 200-meter and 220-yard hurdles and the broad jump. In addition he has bettered the 100-meter record several times, including in the Olympics, with the aid of a tail wind.

Only two other athletes ever have gained four places on Ferris' All-America, selected for Spaulding's Athletic Almanac. Willie Ritola was listed for the two-mile steeplechase and the five, 10 and 15 miles runs in 1927. Loren Murpherson placed No. 1 in the 60, 100, 200 and 300-yard events in 1923. Owens was honored with four positions on the 1935 all-college team but gained recognition in only three on the All-America.

LASH SECOND.

Indiana's Don Lash, the country's foremost two-miler, ranked second to Owens in number of events. The blond Hoosier, who beat the great Paavo Nurmi's record when he ran two miles in 8:58.3 at Princeton last year, failed to come up to expectations in the Olympics but was rated best of the American athletes at 5,000 and 10,000 meters and the cross-country run. He also was placed first among the college performers in the 5,000 and cross-country.

In addition to Owens, eight other of Uncle Sam's successful athletes at Berlin were named to the All-America. They include California's Archie Williams in the 400-meter run; John Woodruff, Pittsburgh's 800-meter champion; Forrest Towns, University of Georgia, 110-meter hurdles; Glenn Hardin, Louisiana State University, 400-meter hurdles; Cornelius Johnson, Compton (Cal.) Junior College, high jump; Earl Meadows, Southern California, pole vault; Kenneth Carpenter, Southern California, discus; and Glenn Morris, now holder of the decathlon mark from Fort Collins, Col.

PITT FRESHMAN.

Only the fact that he was a freshman at Pittsburgh kept Woodruff from making the all-college team. That honor went to Clint Fries, Betham Owens' teammate and national champion at 800 meters, who lost his chance for the Olympic team when he fell in the trials at Randall's Island.

Although beaten frequently by Gene Venzke, Joe Mangano and Archie San Romani at 1,500 meters and one mile, Glenn Cunningham, Kansas, again gained the No. 1 spot as the country's ranking performer at 1,500 meters. In naming Cunningham, Ferris based his selection on Glenn's retaining his national A. A. U. title and his great performance in the Olympics when he broke the world record only to finish second to New Zealand's Jack Lovelock. San Romani, who ran the fastest mile of the year in beating Lovelock in 4:09 at Princeton in October, was placed on the college team, however.

Notable among the absentees are George Caroff, of the Olympic Club, San Francisco. Varoff set up a new standard of 14 feet, 6 1/2 inches in winning the national pole vault championship but failed to qualify for the Olympics. Dave Albritton, another Ohio State athlete, also failed to gain recognition although he leaped 6 feet, 9 3/4 inches to a new record and better the world record in the Olympic final trials.

SAILOR ADAMS BATTLES POOL

The fleet is in. Or rather, Sailor Jack Adams, late of the Pacific coast fleet and a champion in his own right, is here for a promising light-heavyweight battle with Doc Pool, the fast Texan, tonight at the Spring Street arena.

Adams expects to tie Pool up in knots when they meet in the feature match. The sailor holds notable matches over leading light heavies of the south.

It is to be quite a match, inasmuch as Pool has not lost a match since coming here and the sailor has a record that is not to be taken lightly. Both men are fast and rough, leaning more to power. Adams has the skilled methods. It will be a battle of brawn from start to finish.

Earl Miller, Birmingham, and Bill Jeffries, the Arkansas whirlwind, meet in the semi-main event. This could be billed as a top match on many cards.

Farmer Mack, the Canadian, will come to grips with a newcomer, Bill Montana, who hails from Rochester. The promoters expect this contest to rank as one of the best of the season. The opening match goes on at 8:15.

The Spring Street arena is located at the junction of Spring, Peters and Garnett streets.

WARREN FACES SLUDGERS FIVE

A double header at 7:30 o'clock tonight on the Fulton High court will open a busy week of four games for Warren's basketball team. Warren meets the Sludgers, leaders in the city league in the feature of tonight's program, following a preliminary between the Warren Reds and Florence Mors.

Tonight's program will be free to the public and was arranged especially for the benefit of sales representatives of Warren in Texas and Louisiana territories.

Warren has won 16 of its 18 games played thus far. Its record includes victories over some of the best amateur teams in the southern states. Warren won the first half of the Atlanta Commercial League without a defeat and opens the second half on Thursday night against Beck & Gregg.

BREAK O'DAY!

By Ralph Robb

HOMOSASSA, Fla., Jan. 17.—Once his name was used in eight-column ribbons, across the sports pages of the nation.

For a great many years he was one of the greatest pitchers baseball ever knew.

Yesterday we were on an island at Helgate in the Homosassa river. At the wood fire the guide was broiling black bass caught 20 minutes before. Spread out before was the lunch waiting to be supplemented with the fish. It is an old rule of the Homosassa Fishing Club that the piece of resistance for lunch must be fish caught before lunch time. We had them.

Down the river, heading for the gulf, came a large boat. I looked idly and saw the name of the boat was Daz Vance. The first part of the name jogged something in the memory and it was being turned over in the mind when I saw the big fellow at the wheel.

It was Dazzy Vance, big as life and twice as natural. The last time I saw big Dazzy Vance he was dressed in a baseball uniform for the Brooklyn Dodgers. And Wilbert Robinson was on the bench as manager. Grand old Robbie, who passed on in Atlanta more than two years ago.

And there he was at the wheel of a boat cruising down Homosassa river. I knew he had the hotel at what is called New Homosassa, one of the little towns the Florida boom built and left. Dazzy's hotel is about all that's left at New Homosassa, at the head of the river. But he's got it going well, and he and his brother are staying there the year around.

He looked great. The same old long cigar, such as he always wore when he was not on the pitching mound, was in his mouth.

He had a little baseball school last year and may have one this year. He doesn't see much baseball. He fishes and hunts and manages his hotel.

The old Dazzy has become an old settler. And he doesn't seem to miss his name not being in headlines any more.

DAZZY VANCE.

TIGER TAIL ISLAND.

In 1861, Bob Toombs, of Georgia, had a great friend in Florida. His name was United States Senator Yulee.

In those great days when secession was the great question, they planned how to seize the federal forts and armories in their states. And they planned it months before their states actually left the Union.

Yulee's plan almost succeeded. But the federal troops captured the forts at Pensacola after a long and bitter campaign and Florida was lost and a part of the history was written here on this Homosassa river where the fishing boats chug down to the gulf each morning and back again each afternoon.

They pass by, do the little fishing boats, with their booted crews lying on the decks, the island called Tiger Tail island.

You may stop there and go ashore. The old landing is gone. There is no trace of it. The island is barren except for grass and palms and undergrowth. If you search carefully you may find some few traces of masonry and there is an old cistern there, almost filled, and that is all that is left of what once was a great plantation home, rivaling in beauty and luxury the palace of some Indian potentate.

Senator Yulee lived there. Surrounding the great house were orange groves and lemon. There were lime trees and flowers in great profusion. But the federal gunboats came. And then time and wind and rain and storm did its work. And now Tiger Tail island has gone back to the wilderness again. And there is, unless one searches carefully, no trace of the glory and the grandeur the island once knew.

A mile out from the fishing village of Old Homosassa are the ruins of Yulee's great sugar mill. The only life there now is a small dance hall and a liquor store where the fishing guides and the girl friends go to dance.

THE GAME FISH.

The river teems with game. No one fishes for them. The river swarms with mango snappers, some of which weigh six pounds. No one fishes for them.

The fishing is for red fish, for large mouth bass, for sheepshead and for trout.

They are, with the exception of the sheepshead, the game fish, the fighters. When they strike and one lets the line run for that breathless moment before setting the hook, there is more thrill in the feel of a fighter on the line than in catching a boat load of bream.

The game fish supply the big punch. And there is more thrill in a five-pound large mouth bass than in any other fish. The sailfish and the marlin and the tarpon come under the head of heavy labor.

The trout, the bass and the red fish, which is after all a sea bass, are the fish for sport.

SPEAKING OF CHANGES.

Nothing removes one from the accustomed, routine of life as does a fishing vacation.

The ordinary routine calls for an awakening at a fairly early hour, a shave, a bath, breakfast and the journey to the office.

At a fishing club the routine changes completely. There is a shower if one desires, but no one shaves. And the journey is to boats and the day is spent on boats on a river which offers some new vista of palms and sky. Some new idleness of water and sun any time one cares to look.

Pelicans, cormorants, ducks, cranes, herons, marsh hens and gulls are in the sky, on the water, or in the marshes.

The Homosassa club prohibits telephones and radios. It offers books, comfort, tobacco, and other necessities of life.

There is no sound at night save an occasional one from the village across the river. The daily routine is changed completely, absolutely.

I keep listening for that guy who blows his automobile horn loudly at 6 a. m. each morning just outside my apartment window. I miss him very, very much.

Ho, hum! It's almost 8:30 p. m. and still not in bed! This will never do.

MAROONS PACE S. E. C. CAGERS ON THREE WINS

Associated Press Sports Writer.
Mississippi State's Maroons advanced to the head of the parade in the Southeastern conference basketball campaign today after a week of combat that left six quintets undefeated in conference circles.

Mississippi, Georgia Tech, Auburn and Tennessee also remained in unbeaten ranks. Kentucky's Wildcats have not begun their intraconference campaign.

Returning home after a profitable road trip on which Duke and Catholic were conquered to offset a loss to St. Joseph's, Mississippi State whipped Louisiana State, 53 to 36, for its third conference triumph in as many starts.

The Rebels of Mississippi moved to the forefront with a pair of victories over Louisiana State, 50-47 and 40-27. Georgia Tech's versatile squad buried Vanderbilt under a 39-to-27 count for its second conference win.

Tennessee's Volunteers, defending champions and highly regarded among the experts, outlasted Alabama in a spectacular battle that went two extra periods, 36 to 31. It was Tennessee's first start and Alabama's fourth loss in five games.

This week's program is curtailed somewhat because of mid-term examinations. The highlight attraction is on deck for Saturday night at Lexington, where Kentucky opens its campaign against Tennessee.

There are only six conference skirmishes on the menu. Tulane and Mississippi are scheduled to meet on Tuesday, and Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt plays Alabama.

Mississippi State on its eastern invasion dropped Duke, 32-29, kicked Catholic, 41-28, but suffered its first setback at the hands of St. Joseph's, 37-28.

The Plainsmen of Auburn cashed a couple of victories over Sewanee, 42-31 and 34-29, and Georgia Tech had little trouble defeating Florida, 35-25. Tennessee and Vanderbilt rang up wins over Chattanooga in non-conference engagements, 35-15 and 34-25, respectively.

WILDCAT RECORD.

Kentucky wound up an extensive non-league campaign by breaking even last week. Michigan State, a team the Wildcats trounced, 39-21, earlier in the season, turned the tables to nose out the Blue Grass quintet, 24-23. The Wildcats had no trouble in conquering Akron U., 32-22, to finish with seven wins and two losses against outside foes.

Georgia's Bulldogs trounced Florida, 36-18, and Tennessee's Volunteers defeated Louisiana Tech, 44-24, and Southwestern (La.), 33-31. Mississippi conquered a Memphis club, 48-43.

Jackets Look To Clemson Battle

Revenge will be the motif when Tech's tall basketballers take the court against the Clemson College Tigers Wednesday night at the Naval armory.

Clemson defeated Tech, 32 to 30, here last season. Then, too, in football, the Tigers upset the Jackets, 13 to 12.

And so it would not be surprising to see the Techs go out against Clemson imbued with the spirit of crushing the Tigers.

The Tigers will have something to say about that, on the other hand, and so it should be a right interesting game.

One of the biggest surprises to Tech fans was seeing Black Hyder, star guard, sit out the entire Vanderbilt game Saturday night.

Hyder was a big factor in Tech's defeat of Mercer. His defensive play and floor work were superb. It is safe to say that had it not been for his great defensive work early in the game, the outcome might have been somewhat different.

If Tech is good enough without a player like Hyder, as it appeared Saturday night, then coming foes may accept this as a bit of a warning.

A lot of conference clubs will could use a guard of his ability. He is big and fast and a great ball hawk.

Anyway, the Jackets return to work tonight. They'll get in a couple of days of hard practice before they get to get revenge over those tough Tigers from Clemson in a promising inter-conference game.

Indians, Browns Stage Three for Three Swap

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians traded Joe Vosmik, Bill Knickerbocker and Oral Hildebrand to the St. Louis Browns for Julius Solters, Lynn Lary and Harry Adams tonight.

C. C. Slapnicka, head of the Indians' business office, said the trade was proposed by Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Browns.

No cash was involved in the transaction.

The deal was closed after Slapnicka had reached Alva Bradley, president of the Indians, by telephone in Phoenix, Ariz.

"I think it will help both clubs," Slapnicka said, "and, of course, I feel it will strengthen the Indians materially. In Solters we are getting one of the most effective hitters in the majors and in my opinion, Lary is by all odds the best defensive shortstop in the American league."

Slapnicka said "Adams and Hildebrand have both threatened to become good pitchers and neither has ever quite become a star, but change of scenery may help them both."

The trade was Cleveland's most ambitious transaction since 1916 when Tris Speaker came here from Boston. It probably was the most important baseball deal of the winter in both major leagues.

Grant Wallops Top-Ranked Budge In Four of Their Last Five Matches

"Bug in His Eye" Yarn Tops in Alibis for Opponents.

By Jack Troy.

Have you heard the latest about Betsy Grant and his connection with the "bug racket"?

Why, my dears, it is positively shocking. . . .

According to the Associated Press correspondent in Tampa, Fla., Grant was able to beat Frankie Parker, ranked No. 2 nationally, because a bug got in his eye. That is to say, our Mr. Grant's eye. A better alibi for one of Grant's opponents may never see the light of day.

It must be understood, of course, that Grant never has beaten a top-ranking player without having had some extraordinary help, such as catching his opponent "flat" or flat-footed or getting a bug in his eye or maybe ants in his pants. Anybody who has ever unknowingly stood on an ant hill knows how possible this is.

Anyway, the reporter went to incredulous lengths to explain how it was possible for Grant, ranked No. 3, to beat Parker, ranked No. 2. Grant easily won the first two sets.

Quoting from the story: " . . . But had it not been for a bug, Grant may not have been victorious over the second ranking star, who defeated him in the finals of the Sugar Bowl tournament at New Orleans two weeks ago."

"Grant seemed to breeze through the first two sets but began to tire in the third as Parker won, losing only two games to the Atlanta. Grant became slower as play progressed in the fourth set, but managed to win three games, having benefited by the intermissions."

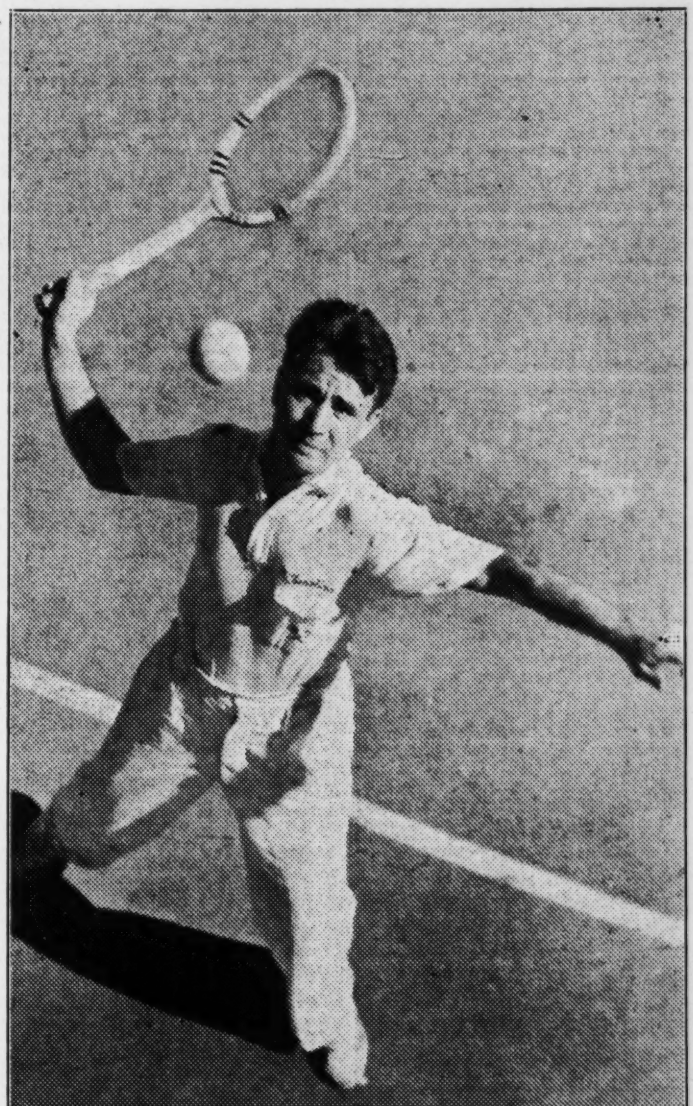

"After Grant had won the first game of the final set, and apparently in no way able to match the physical condition of his opponent, a bug got in his eye and play was halted."

"Parker had outstruck Grant up to this point. (That seems a strange statement, since the sets were even and Grant was leading, one game to love, in the final set), but when play was resumed, Parker (whose stamina was previously stated to be too great) was unable to place and pass Grant with the same accuracy which enabled him to take the third and fourth sets and the little Atlanta breezed through the fifth set without the loss of a single game."

Grant had Grant at the point of collapse and then, following a brief rest, had him breezing through over Parker, who was said to be vastly superior physically.

It was not possible for anybody to alibi for Budge yesterday. Not even Budge himself, because Budge prevented this by statements he made after Grant had walloped him a week ago at Miami.

At that time, the Miami correspond-pondent went to bat for Budge and quoted Budge as saying he was in poor shape, not playing at all well, and so forth. And so on.

Grant beat Budge in straight sets at Miami. Then turned around after Budge had been quoted as saying "he was out to get Grant," and beat him again yesterday in five sets.

Nobody can write that off. They can't attribute it to bugs in the eye or housemaid's knee or anything like that, that Grant, in little over a week, has beaten the top-ranking player of the nation twice, so-called, once.

On successive days, the tiny Bulldog of the baselins beat the top-ranking second ranking players in FIVE SET matches.

NO STAMINA, EH!

In view of this, anything written about his lack of stamina would seem to be pretty silly indeed. Budge had to be classed in top form yesterday because he, himself, went out on the limb, saying in no uncertain terms he would "get Grant."

The simplest answer of all regarding Grant's status as to Budge is to point out that in the last FIVE matches, Grant has won FOUR of them.

But Grant is ranked third, Frankie Parker second and Donald Budge first. The old maids of the U. S. L. T. A. are thinking of using the first two and leaving Grant to his own devices, according to early stories regarding the Davis cup set-up of 1937.

They may do it, but the cold facts and figures show that Grant is better than either of them. Democratic America may not stand for such flagrant discrimination another year. For if the U. S. L. T. A. authorizes in Democratic America something ought to be done about it.

SNEAD'S 67 WINS OAKLAND MEET

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Sam Snead, lean mountaineer from West Virginia, shot a final par-smashing 67 to win the $5,000 Oakland Open golf tournament with a 72-hole total of 270 today.

The 24-year-old shotmaker, who learned the game as a caddy and turned professional only three years ago, put together four rounds of consistent golf to pace a field which numbered most of the nation's established stars.

Snead scored 69 and 65 in the first two rounds to qualify well up among the 60 finalists and finished with an 80 and 87 today to claim first money of $12,000.

He was born at Hot Springs, Va., then went to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., as Greenbrier Club pro.

Two strokes behind came Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, posting 72 to take $750 second money. Until Snead came crashing in Guldahl, winner of the recent Augusta and Miami tournaments, loomed as the likely winner.

John Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., stroked himself into third place with 274.

Four others, Craig Wood, New York; Henry Edward, Henshey, Pa.; John J. Tobay, Cal., and John Rogers, Denver, tied for fourth money at 272.

Harold McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., followed with 276 and Harry Gurnea, of Chicago, winner of the 1937 Los Angeles Open and pretournament favorite here, trailed with 277.

Final scores included: Ed Butler, Augusta, 96; 212-69-281; E. J. Harnett, Little Rock, Ark. 219-77-296; Paul Runyan, 211-69-290; Sam Parks Jr., Pittsburgh 214-71-285; Horton Smith, Chicago 213-72-285; Leo Diegel, Philadelphia, Pa. 217 Picked Up; Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee, Pa. 213-67-280; Ben Lovins, Richmond, 210-78-286.

DEAN WITH IMMORTALS.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—Ty Cobb: "Where would I rank Dizzy Dean among the pitchers? I think he is sure to finish in the first five of all time—I mean up with the Mattys and Johnnies and Alexanders. I'll tell you why I feel this way about him. In addition to plenty on the ball—curve, control, a cool head—Dean is at his best in a tough spot. He can hear down when he has to—and that's one of the main things. The hot spots of the game never worry him. He still needs a few more years to get his final ranking among the all-time group, but it's my belief that he will land there sure."

George M. Church (former tennis star): "The greatest tennis player I ever saw play was Bill Tilden. The name is Bill Tilden. When Bill was in his prime, I don't think anyone ever really knew just how good he was. He'd murder you with the first set and then practice odd shots through most of the second. He could let down, loaf, and come back with the fastest rust I ever saw. In my opinion, Tilden played each tennis stroke better than the specialists could handle their main offering. He not only never had a weakness in his prime days, but he was also a great court general who knew how to break down an opponent's mental attitude by continually crossing him. Add to all this power, speed and amazing stamina. Remember, the Bill Tilden they have been watching lately has been playing topnotch tennis for 25 years."

Joe Kirkwood—"We are all set, Hagen and I, for our trip around the world. I mean around the world. As soon as we can get a ship out, we're off for Australia and New Zealand. Then through the Malay States and Africa. From there we move on to Japan, east and west coasts, on the way to Cape Town. We may hit Japan. They play golf everywhere now. In India, many golf enthusiasts make their own clubs out of wicker, wood, or steel and wire. The best golf spot? I'd say South Africa, with Australia and New Zealand close. We expect to travel something like 80,000 miles—possibly 100,000—before we return. That's a long way to hit a golf ball."

Dutch Clark (Detroit Lions): "The hardest man I ever tried to stop? Bronko Nagurski—especially two or three years ago. Weighing around 220 pounds, he was like a mass of moving steel. He always had high knee action and when one of those knees happened to land it was like stepping in front of a pile-driver or a big truck. It was dangerous to hit him head-on. I've seen 240-pounders knocked colder than a fish on ice. Old-timers who have seen most of them all tell me the Bronk was the hardest man to stop that football ever knew. He didn't have to be elusive and he didn't need any interference. As several others have said, he was the one man in football who ran his own interference."

George Hagen, the wrestling marine, who last week evened the series with Karl Davis by pinning the massive Ohioan, has drawn Milo Steinborn, the invincible German, as his opponent for Friday night at the Atlanta theater.

Hagen right now is a great favorite here, and now boasts a record in Atlanta of 16 wins in 18 starts. His two losses were at the hands of Davis and Dick Raines and both were of the questionable type.

Hagen and Steinborn, weighing the same and built much the same, should form a "natural." Milo asked for the shot after tossing Blue Sam Jennings in last week's semi-final and then viewing Hagen in action against Davis. He says he is in the best shape of the past five years and appears firmly convinced he can stop the former marine champion.

Speer is working on the preliminaries. In the meantime, Karl Davis is howling long and loud for a third match with Hagen, claiming Speer, who was refereeing, deliberately brought about his defeat. Frank says Davis alone was to blame, having repeatedly refused to break, thus causing him to snap the rope and spin both men to the floor, with Hagen winning in that manner, since he was on top.

BEST DRESSED.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Ida I, streamlined cruiser, owned by J. P. Pater, of Nulley, N. J., was judged the best-dressed yacht as 138 that football ever knew. He didn't have to be elusive and he didn't need any interference. As several others have said, he was the one man in football who ran his own interference.

BITSY SMASHES NO. 1 PLAYER 2D SUNDAY MORROW

Atlanta Mite Outlasts,
Outpaces Californian,
4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, Atlanta tennis tryamite, handed Donald Budge, America's top-ranking player, his second straight defeat in as many Sundays here this afternoon, beating the lanky Californian red-head to retain his Dixie championship, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Grant, ranked at No. 3 by the U. S. L. T. A. recently, lost the opening set, then won the second and third. Budge took the fourth, but was outclassed on the clay courts of Davis Island in the final set.

The Atlanta out-placed and out-lasted the Californian. Both were in perfect condition and apparently at the top of their game. Their terrific placements and passing shots were perfectly timed.

STARTS ON TOP.

Grant started on top, taking the first two games of the opening set, but Budge rallied to win three in a row before Grant won another, then took the seventh and eighth games, losing only one point in each.

Grant broke through Budge's service in the ninth, but lost his own in the tenth, giving Budge the set. Grant failed to get many of Budge's smashing shots in the opening set, but as the second started he began covering more ground. Time and again he made retrieves which seemed almost impossible, working Budge out of position, then dropping a soft shot just over the net or placing the ball on the inside of the baseline in the corner.

BUDGE EVENS MATCH.

Budge evened the match at 1-all after Grant had taken the Californian's service in the first game of the second set.

Budge won the third game after Grant had duced once, but the little fellow rallied to take the fourth, fifth and sixth

COLE BLEASE WEDS IN SOUTH CAROLINA

NEWBERRY, S. C., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Cole L. Blease, former South Carolina Governor and United States senator, and Mrs. Carolina Floyd Knott were married at 5 p. m. today at the home of the bride's parents here.

The marriage rites came on the 40th birthday of Mrs. Blease, a widow who worked at the Columbia office of the Federal Land Bank. The former Governor observed his 68th birthday in October.

"There'll be no trip," Blease said. "I've got to go back to work and make a living."

He said he would continue his law practice in Columbia. He has maintained an office there since his retirement from the United States senate in 1931.

NEW YORK CAFE RACKET TO BE AIRED IN COURT

Group Collects $2,000,000 a Year for Protection From Bombs, Labor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Nine men will be called to trial in supreme court tomorrow on charges of operating a $2,000,000-a-year "shake-down" racket against Manhattan restaurants and night club owners.

Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey tonight said the trial would be conducted by his chief assistant, William B. Horland, who was prepared to present a behind-the-scenes picture of how a large-scale racket is organized.

The 153-page indictment charges 41 counts of extortion, seven of attempted extortion and one count of conspiracy, and names the Metropolitan Restaurant and Cafeteria Association as a co-defendant.

It charges the individual defendants with organizing the association for the express purpose of extorting money from restaurant operators by threatening them with stench bombs and labor trouble unless they joined.

Dewey declares the racket was organized originally by the late Arthur "Dutch" Schultz, Fliegenheimer and Jules Martin, both of whom have been slain since by underworld enemies.

Fliegenheimer and Martin, as well as Abe Borson and Harry S. Koenig, who also met violent death during the 17-month investigation, were named co-conspirators in the indictment.

Still another defendant who will be absent when the trial is called is Max Pines, who jumped to his death out of a window last month. All except Fliegenheimer were active in labor unions.

administration of the Commerce Department due to patronage placements. Roper is a practical politician. He was commissioner of internal revenue under Woodrow Wilson, and has been mentioned as a possible successor to Farley.

Roper is Popular. The commerce secretary is a Democrat of the old school and not a New Dealer. He is the most popular man in the cabinet with Democratic conservatives. Attacks on Roper have centered on the activities of subordinate department heads. He was criticized for his alleged failure to take swifter action in getting safety-act legislation through congress and now his department has become the target of verbal brick-bats in connection with several airplane disasters.

Much of the unfavorable comment aroused by the Commerce Department's alleged delinquencies in air safety has fallen on Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, whose resignation is believed impending. Vidal will quit, it is reported, only after the present air-safety criticism has subsided because he doesn't intend to be the "fall guy" for somebody else's shortcomings.

In the Ohio accident, an automobile carrying three persons hurtled over a 40-foot embankment.

In the New Jersey crash, the car, unidentified and estimated to have been going 60 miles an hour, crashed through the guard gate of an open drawbridge, carrying its occupants in a 70-foot plunge. Witnesses disagreed as to whether more than two persons were in the car.

The census bureau at Washington reported automobile fatalities during the week ending January 1 in 129 cities totaled 313—107 more than the corresponding week in 1935, and that for the year there were 178 fewer deaths in 131 cities than in 1935.

Crowds in Cleveland Storm Withers' Show

Jane Withers, Atlanta's gift to juvenile Hollywood stars, is going over with a big bang in her personal appearance tour of the country.

her uncle, J. C. Withers, of 440 Linwood avenue, N. E., a rubber firm representative, said yesterday.

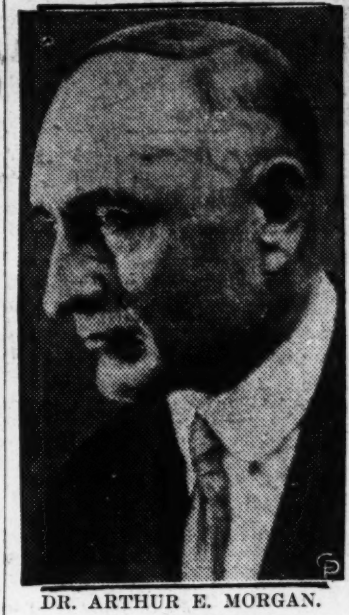

Withers, whose brother, Walter E. Withers, Hollywood businessman, is Jane's father, returned yesterday from a trip to Cleveland, where he saw Jane Saturday.

"Jane is appearing at the Palace theater, and by 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, 10,000 tickets had been sold, and there were at least 1,000 persons outside the theater, trying to get inside," he said.

"Hundreds of children jammed the fire escapes backstage, hoping for a glimpse of Jane. Police had to be called out. When Jane and I tried to enter her hotel dining room, the crowd became so great her bodyguard, Tex Trent, a strapping fellow, had to pick Jane up in his arms and carry her back to her room."

Withers also revealed that Jane's stipend for her personal appearances is $5,000 a week.

gram for cheaper electricity, was described as his "swan song" by an official close to the White House.

The TVA chairman stood virtually alone among those responsible or shaping the administration's power policy after issuing a statement to the press urging co-operative effort to pool public and private electricity in the south-east in order to end the TVA's legal war with private utilities.

Brought Fight Into Open. The statement brought into the open sharp conflict between Morgan and David Lilienthal, TVA director in charge of the federal power program. They have disagreed on policy since the TVA was launched, nearly four years ago.

Lilienthal has taken the position that there should be no compromise with TVA objectives; that unless the utilities meet the government half way in its program for cheap power the utilities should be driven out of business or forced to government rates. Lilienthal found Morgan opposed to this policy.

Senator George W. Norris, Republican, Nebraska, and Representative John E. Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, co-authors of the act creating TVA, sharply denounced Morgan's proposal.

Has President's Support. Lilienthal was said to have President Roosevelt's full support in the controversy now approaching a climax. This was demonstrated last summer when he reappointed Lilienthal to a nine-year term over Morgan's opposition.

Lilienthal advocates a vigorous fight by the TVA to lower electric rates through public ownership of utilities, without compromise with private companies except on terms that will insure full benefits to the public from federal power developments.

Morgan hit at Lilienthal by asserting that "public officials should cease coercion . . . by threats of construct-

JAPANESE INCURSIONS IN MONGOLIA REPORTED

Ulan Bator Dispatches Claim Advance Fifty Miles in Interior.

MOSCOW, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A dispatch from Ulan Bator, Outer Mongolia, tonight said it was reported there Japanese-Manchoukuo troops began a series of incursions into Outer Mongolia which carried them 50 miles into the interior last Tuesday.

The force was reported to have consisted of cavalry detachments, 10 trucks carrying 200 infantrymen and one airplane.

It penetrated Outer Mongolia, the reports said, in the vicinity of Lake Buir Nor (on the eastern extremity of Outer Mongolia).

The reported incursions, the dispatch said, were considered grave in Ulan Bator.

On January 7 the Manchoukuo government lodged a strong complaint with the Outer Mongolian administration against alleged incursions by Mongolian troops into Manchoukuo.

THE MILLIONTH SCHICK SHAVER WAS MADE IN DECEMBER, 1936

A MILLION FACES SHOULD CONVINCE YOU!

WHEN a thousand men bought Schick Shavers they might have been cranks experimenting with a new gadget. But when a million men use Schick Shavers daily it means that the shaving habits of the world are being revolutionized.

Among a million faces, there are all kinds . . . Tough, wiry and whirly beards! Tender, sensitive skins! Smooth youthful cheeks growing their first down! Old, gnarled and loosely-wrinkled skins shaved by hands no longer firm and strong! Faces of outdoor men toughened by exposure to weather! Sick, bedridden men, and men who are totally blind!

And the Schick Shaver gives them all quick, close shaves with no possibility of cutting them or causing the slightest discomfort.

The greatest single joy in a man's personal life

Painless shaving, unknown until the Schick Shaver was invented, is such a radical improvement that questions and doubts are aroused. Though a million men use the Schick, millions more do not know or doubt the simple truth that the Schick shaves all types of beards and that it has no blades and needs no lather.

You may not get a good shave the first time you try a Schick. If your skin is hardened and calloused by lather and blades, it cannot enter the shearing slots far enough for a close shave. As you use the Schick, Nature discards the calloused skin, replacing it with a new, more youthful and flexible skin which now enters the shearing slots deeply enough for an "evening dress" shave.

You can afford a Schick Shaver

Forget, for a minute, that $15 buys you shaving comfort every day of your life. Think of it in terms of an investment. With a Schick you never buy blades. There is nothing to sharpen or replace. You need no soap, no cream, no brush, no lotions or powder. The Schick pays for itself over and over.

Schick users tell us they would not sell their shavers for $100 if they could not buy another.

Why not some other shaver

Schick invented the shaver. None ever shaved before his. The greater part of his working life has been spent studying all possible shapes and mechanisms.

After countless experiments he found that a flat shearing head with an extremely thin plate nestling into the skin gave the maximum of safety and shaving efficiency. He has never found any reason to doubt that his present basic construction is the best of all for electrical shaving.

Try one for yourself

Buy only from an authorized Schick dealer at the advertised price, $15. If you pay less, there is a possibility that the shaver is not subject to guarantee and service.

Atlantans' Sartorial Splendor Intrigues Sally Forth's Fancy

By Sally Forth.

IT'S RESORT time in all the world, and many Atlantans are off to the land of sunshine and flowers, their bags fairly bulging with smart resort clothes. Sally's been delving into this absorbing subject of clothes, and she loves to talk about new fashions, especially in January. It's invigorating. One of the most feted of the buds, pretty and blonde Laura Maddox, gathered together an ideal wardrobe for her sojourn in Boca Raton, Fla. You know, she and her attractive cousin, Emily Alsop, of Noroton, Conn., who's been such a popular visitor here for the past few weeks, have gone down to visit Emily's mother, Mrs. Frederic Neilson, at her lovely winter home.

Laura is one of the smartest of Atlanta's young in matters of dress as well as others. She has bought the cutest beach outfit, which consists of marine blue overalls worn with a bright red shirtwaist, and you take the overalls off and there you have a romper suit. Topping this tricky costume is a gay red bandana that matches the red shirtwaist. For sports wear Laura likes a red 'kerchief at her throat, and a shiny red belt at her waist, which add bright touches to a snappy white shirtwaist jacket and a navy blue linen skirt.

Emily Alsop will have a grand time playing on the beach in a brown and white print suit composed of shorts and halter, and if she decides to go out sailing she can slip right into a matching dress which buttons down the front to the waistline, and boasts of the swankiest collar. It's one of those monk hood affairs, and when worn over her head, it will protect Emily's wave as well as frame her face becomingly.

Those popular Atlantans, Mrs. Gus Dodd and Mrs. William Satterwaite, who are already enjoying the beauty and gaiety of Miami, chose some of the loveliest things for their famously stunning wardrobes. Mrs. Dodd is particularly striking in a navy blue and white knitted jersey skirt and vest and one of the very new tuxedo jackets made of dazzling white shakshin. A special white satin stars on Mrs. Satterwaite's formal list. It's printed with startlingly beautiful red tulips with long green stems, and with this she wears an ermine wrap that's a perfect dream of softness.

Martha Burnett, who has had a gay and busy season as treasurer of the current deb club, has already spent a glorious week or so at the winter home of her parents, the Gordons Burdett, at Rockledge, Fla., and Ann Irby visited her at this lovely winter retreat. Now the girls are planning another grand vacation week—this time to last six weeks. Martha leaves Friday with her family for their home, and joining them on the 24th will be Ann and Catherine Gray. Their program of good times includes several week ends at Palm Beach, and they have been invited to spend a week end with Ann Hurt in Miami, where she and her mother, Mrs. Joel Hurt, are living. Deaky Scott is Ann's guest now in the lovely resort, and the quintet of Atlanta belles are planning big times together.

Martha will wear the most intriguing costume over her bathing suit. It is navy blue, has a wide sailor collar bound in white pique, and a very short skirt. It looks like a little Princess Elizabeth dress, and it's the newest thing in beach wear. Ann favors simply tailored pastel suits with bright printed scarfs for resort wear. With these she will wear matching shoes for dancing evenings. Ann has a love of a printed chiffon with a fabulously wide accordion pleated skirt that will swirl dramatically about her ankles.

WHEN Russell Timmons and his bride, the former Mildred Mathieson, dashed away for their wedding trip after their marriage Thursday they departed amid a shower of vari-colored rice and confetti. What made this traditional bridal gesture all the more interesting, was the fact that it was the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Willis Timmons, who threw the shower, and it was with the same rice and the FRIENDLY COUNSEL By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers and referred to the column "Friendly Counsel" by Caroline Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:
Because we have a 13-year-old son, I would like to hold our home together if possible but I am sorely tempted to pull out and make my own way. My husband has two single brothers and he expects me to sit at home and smile while he goes about to dances and parties with them. His mother says I am jealous. Maybe I am but not without cause. I think any wife is within her rights when she objects to her husband's going out when he wishes, leaving her at home. I have tried to do about 12. I don't want to go with him, feel that I have the right to go with him but only on rare occasions am I invited. I am fed up with injustice. Once I did go and supported myself and I can do it again. Won't you advise me or console me?

ANSWER:
If all the lonely and neglected wives could join hands and make a circle, they would probably girdle the globe. What's to do about it? There are several things a wife can do and the last thing she should do is check out. Now I know it is well-nigh impossible to get your husband to be friendly and affectionate toward a husband who behaves as though he didn't have a wife. She can hardly greet him with a smile, make pleasant conversation at the dinner table when she knows perfectly well that as soon as dinner's over he will be out and gone with the boys for an evening of dates and dancing. How can she refrain from being jealous when she has rivals? How can she pretend that she isn't being short-changed and cheated when night after night he goes after the girls, leaving her to have to suck her thumbs, and weep her eyes red? Well, some wives do and that's the answer.

Every poor woman in a jam with a man she loves can talk herself black in the face about her rights to this and that. She may have rights at the poles; in the offices and in the factories but her rights to her husband's worth exactly nothing except those she wins by making her husband love her. Barring her right to his support which the law recognizes and will force him to put up all the rest are based on love, not on law.

So men leave weeping wives at home if it happens that they have a better time without their wives. The reasons are as various as the individuals. Sometimes the wife is a joy-killer. Sometimes she is too selfish and selfishness feels it is his inalienable right to spend the surplus on himself. And there are many married men and fathers who remain bachelors at heart; wolves in sheep's clothing.

Even these husbands furnish their wives and children something worth counting on: a name, a roof, clothing, food and a certain sort of security and perfection. None of these can be tossed aside lightly as every woman who has made her living well knows. Why throw away the warm coat because the seams are ripped and the buttons lost, if one hasn't another coat to take its place? It is better to mend it and wear it. Why break up a home and separate a father from his child and deny the child the advantages of a normal family life because the husband and father is shabby. It is much better to mend what can be mended, patch up what can be patched and go bravely on.

Can You Think of the One You Want to Quote?

Sir Francis Bacon said: "The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs."

Most people are familiar with these pithy sayings that have been drawn from the experience and from the literature of all the nations. But often we are at a loss for the exact wording.

Our Service Bureau at Washington has a new Booklet in which have been arranged in alphabetical order all of the famous proverbs of the world. You will find it an invaluable reference source when looking up a saying that you want to quote.

INSTALLMENT I.
NEWS OF A DEATH.

Diana Lake pressed her small watch against her ear to make sure it was going. Even so it was impossible to catch the faint tick above the surrounding clamor.

What a hullabaloo these creatures made! Every table but hers swarmed with young Indians—students, she gathered, from the near-by School of Economics. Why, she wondered, must Indians study economics, and why must they jabber and play tricks on one another like a tribe of monkeys? She sighed to think that overnight, as it were, her serene Daffodil tea room had turned itself into a social club for failed B.A.'s an offensive lot, too, with their too-frequent glances in her direction.

Here was another, all impudent jet eyes and skin like burnt toast, who, taking advantage of her gesture, had thrust his own wristwatch under her nose. He had two gold teeth, and, worse than a girl's bangle studded with turquoises.

"He is fairly late, what?" his grin was gleamingly facetious. "It is now 5:15. You see?"

"Thank you," she said coldly. "But I have the right time—and with a aloofness which froze—or should have done—she fixed an expressionless gaze on the door through which Adrian, at any moment, might come.

But would? Most likely he still had his eye firmly glued to a microscope, calmly oblivious to the passage of time. It was too bad of him, considering he had wired her to meet him, and she, instead of going home after her long train journey, had come straight here. He had news for her—and she had already guessed what the news would be. Indeed, she was secretly hurt that Adrian, oddly dense in some ways, should be rushing to her with the very tidings she least wanted to hear. He had been offered a post. That meant he would be sailing at once back to America. In other words, it was all over save for registering a wholly spurious delight, and composing a nice, sisterly letter for him to read on the boat.

If her reflections were tinged with regret, no one, watching her, would have suspected it. Tranquil and steady, she drank the tea she had very wisely ordered, lit a cigarette, and rather than waste time on sentimental fancies, unfolded a letter she had meant to read, and gave it—to the outward eye at least—undivided attention.

Diana's type was Irish. Her gray eyes under slender black brows and her dark hair, smooth and with a natural wave in it, she had inherited from her handsome actor father, Herbert Lake; her milky pearl skin, humorous mouth, and general look of capability came from her little actress mother, Margaret Fairbank, now playing in London. In dress she inclined to the unembellished—and this fact contributed largely to her air of restful poise. Dark blue suited her best, and as a rule she stuck to it. Her dress now was blue, glove fitting.

AUNT HET

By ROBERT QUINN

Of course it was a stroke. What else could it have been? Besides, the doctor would have known. Diana was about to tuck the letter into her bag when on the back sheet she noticed one of her mother's inevitable postscripts:

"A part from the hints she dropped, I've no notion how her little fortune was left. We may take it for granted, though, that it will not go to anyone who has real need of it. Please don't think this a harsh criticism! I mention the matter only because I should have liked so much to see Adrian get something. It would be common justice, in a way, but of course, such a possibility is out of the question. You know how hard I've tried ever since Adrian came over to get her to see him. After all, his sole motive, when she and Joe parted, was to stick by his own father; but it was no use, she refused to be interested. Strange that anyone so charming should possess this rather hard streak!"

Strange? Not in the least. Rose Somervell had been a thoroughly selfish old woman, as all but Margaret would admit. It was her greed over almost at the time of the American slump which had helped ruin her divorced husband, O. Rose knew that—and she also knew how Adrian's struggle to complete first his Harvard medical and later his studies in brain surgery had been rendered 10 times harder through her rapacity. Here Adrian had been since last April, living in a cheap boarding house, hardly able to buy shoes, his one idea to crowd a year's work under the celebrated Gordon, into six months—yet not once had Rose asked him to a meal or troubled to inquire how he was doing. That was Rose all over. She looked again at the door. A tall, absent-looking young man in a somewhat battered Burberry had entered the shop, and through horn-rimmed spectacles was scanning the crowded tables. Diana sprang up, and before he had seen her touched his arm.

Adrian Somervell jumped. His near-sighted brown eyes lit with a glad, nervous brightness, but he did not speak, only gripped her hand, let it fall, and lowered his head.

Adrian had stripped off his Burberry and dumped it on the floor by the wall. Now he was seated opposite Diana, regarding her with a fixed gaze.

"Tea and crumpets," Diana ordered briskly. She was used to attending to such matters. Adrian was staring at her still in a shy, speculative way that for the first time in their renewed acquaintance made her self-conscious. She put up a barrage of light chatter between herself and the new awkwardness, but Adrian's eyes told her that he had descended on them both.

"The family doesn't know yet about our company going on the rocks. I didn't want to worry mummy till she'd got her first night over. Did you see the notices of her new play?"

"Notices? Your mother's, did you say?"

"Adrian!" She gave up in despair. "Don't you ever know what's going on outside your hospital? Last night, the 'Training'—Went over with a bang. Here, wake up!"

"That's great," he murmured, contrite and vague. "No, I thought both your parents were out of town. I've not been around since you left. And you? Planning to stick here for a bit?"

"If I'm lucky enough to land a part, I'm a make-weight actress, Adrian. I ought to be behind a typewriter, not footlights. Funny—Isn't it? There is mummy, practical as they make them, but able to do whatever she likes with an audience; and there's daddy, brimming over with temperament, but can't act a nut. I must have drawn the wrong combination, that's all. Between ourselves, I'm ready to chuck it."

"Chuck the stage? You mean you wouldn't mind?"

He was playing for time. How irritating of him!

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

It's only a joke to part of the company.

Have you ever noticed how some people always seem to take glee in hauling out the mildewed past little private jokes that go right over your head? You, for instance, start to tell about a show you've seen. And then one of these know-it-alls says, "Show! Ha, ha. What does that remind you of, Annie?" And then Annie says, "Oh, yes! Show! Ha, ha." And they both go off into guffaws, and you are left hanging on to your chair, and wondering why in the name of sense you ever came around to see these people anyhow.

Personally we think it's a nasty snubish trick. The people who play it are just trying to boost themselves into some sort of an inner circle. As long as we happen to be around, we think that they should keep their private jokes in the closet with the skeleton.

When they get really unbearable, though, we do have to use them a bit. We just laugh with them, and say, "Oh, yes, I heard about that. Show! Ha, ha." And you should see the startled expression on their faces. It's really wonderful the way you get afterward, just to watch it.

WALLACE TO EMPLOY $100,000,000 'STICK' TO RAISE FARM PRICES

Unique Provision of Agriculture Act Gives Secretary Necessary Power.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace has served notice he intends to wield a "big stick" handed him by congress in an effort to sway prices received by farmers. "With a $100,000,000 fund at his command, Wallace announced yesterday that the federal government would go into the egg buying business because of a "sharp drop in recent weeks in the wholesale and farm prices of eggs."

Edison's Cook Dies Among Homefolks

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 17. (AP)—Julius Edison, for 11 years the kitchen genius in the home of the late Thomas Edison, died today at his home in West Orange, N. J., of a heart ailment and against the advice of physicians, he insisted upon making the two-day trip to the Seaboard Air Line en route to a train to ease his journey, while Queenie said proudly: "It just shows who my people are."

Last Tuesday, she succumbed, with her husband and children at her bedside. A month ago she was stricken with a heart ailment and against the advice of physicians, he insisted upon making the two-day trip to the Seaboard Air Line en route to a train to ease his journey, while Queenie said proudly: "It just shows who my people are."

Wallace said the purchases would be financed under a unique provision inserted in the agricultural adjustment act by congress in August, 1935. This hands Wallace 30 per cent of all custom receipts "for agricultural purposes," or about $100,000,000 each year.

This trading power reposing in the fund already has been used by Wallace this season on grapefruit, pears and onions, which recorded bumper crops despite the drought. With the money, he is financing movement of these commodities into new markets, and also encouraging new uses of by-products. Wallace used a similar plan last fall when drought and feed shortage forced millions of head of livestock on the market. Last fall he announced his agents would buy cattle when the heavy marketings set prices too low.

Actual purchases were limited to less than 4,000 head, costing about $100,000, but department spokesmen said the federal program had tended to keep prices up.

The egg purchase program was seen as a similar strategic move.

The department's announcement said the program was aimed at removing surplus eggs from the market and distributing them among persons on relief. Agricultural department reports, however, show there is no surplus, and one department spokesman said the government would buy few, if any eggs, providing farm and retail prices moved toward each other.

MRS. C. S. SEALY SR. SUCCEUMS IN FLORIDA

Stroke Fatal to Member of Prominent Georgia Family.

PANAMA CITY, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Charles S. Sealy Sr., 68, member of a prominent Georgia family, died here today at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Ruby Harris, from a paralytic stroke suffered last night. Her husband and two daughters were at the bedside.

Mrs. Sealy was Miss Lena Hattaway of Bluffton, Ga. She and Mr. Sealy made their home at Cuthbert and Edison, Ga., before moving to Panama City several years ago.

Funeral services will be tomorrow afternoon. Survivors include the husband, two daughters, Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Ruth Hendricks, of Panama City; two sons, J. R. (Bob) Sealy, of Dothan, Ala., and Charles Sealy, of Cottonwood, Ala.; three brothers, W. B. Hattaway, of Brundage, Ga.; Floyd Hattaway and J. C. Hattaway, of Bluffton, Ga.; and two sisters, Mrs. L. M. Rameau and Miss Leo Hattaway, of Brundage.

The latest press statement from the federation, said the organization did not "presume" to speak officially for the Methodist Episcopal church, but that the statement represented the views of "over two thousand" Methodists, including eight bishops.

The statement emphasized the federation was not attacking the Catholic church or its religious policies, but "the political policies of the Vatican."

"The latest press statement from the Vatican," the federation reported, "on its anti-religious campaign does not mention atheism. It speaks of 'the Vatican has taken its stand. It is with Franco, Hitler, Mussolini and Japan just as certainly as though it had signed an agreement or entered the understandings between those pro deo societies.'"

Cited as recent Vatican "pronouncements" were Pope Pius's Christmas message and "the renewed invitation to Protestants and Catholics to join the pro deo societies."

"It is the business of the Jesuit clique that now dominates the Vatican," the statement continued, "to cover their political objectives with religious slogans so that the Archbishop of Westminster can say 'when Fascism goes down, God's cause goes down,' and General O'Duffy can take his blue shirts from Ireland to Spain on a 'crusade for the Catholic faith.'"

In reference to the pro deo societies "pronouncement," the statement said, "it is significant that the organization mentioned as carrying out the instructions of the Pope in this matter is 'the sacred congregation for extraordinary ecclesiastical affairs.' This is the department that deals with cordials and the Vatican's diplomatic relations. It is plain that in the 'religious' campaign against Communism the Vatican is acting politically."
